

Christos Kostopoulos

Christos Kostopoulos is an associate within our Project Finance & Development, Energy and Utilities practice groups. He advises a wide range of both domestic and international stakeholders, including investors and contractors, banks and public authorities and he focuses on public law, administrative law and administrative procedure law, public procurement law and utilities, as well as energy and environment law.

Before joining Lambadarios, Christos worked in three French and international law firms in Paris, advising clients on public procurement projects, environmental law issues, as well as projects relating to renewable energies and EU regulatory affairs. Christos has also worked as an associate at a Greek law firm.

As an EU lawyer, Christos has passed the exam for his admission in the Paris Bar Association as well. He holds a Master 2 degree in Public Economic Law from the Faculty of Law of Paris Panthéon Assas University (2023), as well as an LL.M. degree in Public Financial Law (financial regulation) from the Law School of the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens (2022).
